

The ISG Smart Card Centre Open-Day

16th September 2004

The Smart Card Centre is part of the Information Security Group (ISG) at Royal Holloway University of London and was set up in 2002 by Vodafone, Giesecke & Devrient and the ISG.

This year the Centre is planning an open day to act as a networking and exhibition event for its sponsors, supporters and guest lecturers. The Open Day is expected to become an annual event including practical demonstrations of products and technology plus a prestige lecture from a distinguished guest. The event will offer companies and individuals the chance to mingle with clients, competitors, staff and students in a friendly academic environment. Information Security MSc/PhD students will also be encouraged to participate and may wish to discuss career opportunities.

The venue for the main activity will be Royal Holloway's world famous Picture Gallery which will serve as the exhibition hall and venue for the buffet luncheon. After lunch the guest lecture will take place in the Bourne Lecture Theatre 2.

Exhibition space is available for sponsors and supporters as well as SCC project demonstrations. To make the event as interesting as possible, exhibitors are strongly encouraged to show practical demonstrations particularly of new products and technologies.
